MOVIES ARE POPULAR IN COUNTRIES OLD WORLD

(By Associated Press.)
CHRISTIANA, Norway, June 26.—For several years municipal governments of a number of Norwegian cities have owned and operated their motion picture theaters. When they were taken over by the municipalities the municipal boards decided the net profits should be used for the promotion of cultural purposes in the home localities.

A survey of how Christiania, has spent this income during the last year was published recently by the local press. The city has a population of about 260,000. The net profits of the operation in 1921 amount to about $350,000. This sum was awarded of various cultural aims, namely 700,000 kroner to a studio building for the Norwegian sculptor, Gustav Vigeland, 400,000 kroner to a "people theater," on the city east side, 100,000 kroner to a new concert hall, 100,000 kroner to a fund for the support of science and 40,000 kroner to a new music pavilion. In previous years the studio of Mr. Vigeland has been awarded 700,000 kroner, the people's theater, 1,000,000 kroner and the same source.

The city of Trondheim, in northern Norway, with a population of about 45,000 inhabitants, has a net profit of 322,000 kroner from its municipal motion picture theater in 1921. Of this surplus 100,000 kroner was awarded to the city theater and the rest in minor allocations to other cultural institutions and organizations. In a similar manner other Norwegian cities of late years have supported their cultural institutions and created new cultural enterprises.

EFFICIENCY IS WATCHWORD FOR MINING WORLD

Data Obtained Indicates Value of Work and Mining Men Should Take Interest

Promotion of efficiency and economy in the mining industry by standardization of mining methods and by an intensive study of the subject of timber preservation, is being urged by the standardization division of the American mining congress. A special committee of the organization, with Gerald Sherman of the Phelps Dodge corporation as chairman has been applying itself closely to the subject for several months, and data already obtained indicates the value of the work.

Among the most important suggestions advanced by the committee upon the basis of its completed studies is that which stresses the necessity for encouraging use of rational designs in mine timber framing of all kinds, although they need not be precisely the same for all districts. A more general use of framing plants at the source for the benefit of small mines also is advocated by the committee.

Although the benefits arising from timber preservation are acknowledged in principle, the committee has found very little information available concerning the value of this practice for application to any particular district. The recommendation accordingly has been made that observations, tests and records should be made in all districts so that it can be known as soon as possible, where the advantage of treatment lies.

"There is every reason to standardize timber framing for an individual mine or group of mines," says Mr. Sherman, "with simplicity of design and ease of operation as the principle objects to be sought. This would appear particularly in ore chutes and manways in manways, the question principally is one of safety, while in chutes it is a matter of durability and ease in loading from them."

It has developed that the widest divergence in mine timbers is found in the ties for tracks. Very little is accurately known of the bearing power of ground to support ties, but there should be a relation between the spacing of the ties and the weight of the load on the rail in the opinion of the committee.

Economy in the use of timbers depends very largely in selection of mining methods which require the least amount of timbering. In this connection, consideration has been given to the use of Gunite as a substitute for timbering, and its use has been found successful in many cases and worthy of close attention.

Churchill declared he did not hesitate to say all horrors that had occurred in Belfast were due to organization in that territory of two divisions of Irish republican armies and continued efforts of partisans of the south to break down the Ulster government.

Churchill said "the government had supplied the northern Irish government with 50,000 troops for defense. He added that the northern government would be supported effectively at all costs in any attempt that might be made to coerce it into submission, to the south."

"The Sun" says Churchill said "had to realize that they would never see Ulster except by their own free will and the more they kicked the worse it would be for them. He said the imperial government would endeavor to stand between the antagonists and prevent loss of life and destruction of property."
